- The pace must always be provided under the breed standard in the various phases of work. Temporary motivated alterations by contingent stimuli are tolerated.
- The speed must be according to the soil, the density and the games, and must be readily adapted to the changing of the above condition.
- The search must be such as to ensure the effective exploration of the terrain.
- The consent will be spontaneous: it will be tolerated on command only if promptly executed.
- The connection will be constant, the dog will be obedient to the conductor calls and ready to direct their search in the indicated direction.
- Is request the accuracy to whir and the shot that will always be performed by the tenant.
- In case of tests on dead games, dogs must perform the carry as stated below: on the shot, by the official shooter, the dog must remain correct. The carryover will have to be executed on command. It's tolerated with penalization the departure of the dog to the fall of the game. Failure to carry the dead game causes the elimination (except in the case of material impossibility: game fallen into unreachable place). The dog that passed back and forth several times on the dead game and that does not show interest in finding it, he will always be eliminated. One that performs the carry improperly or with hesitations, stops or dropping the game, will be eliminated. The conspicuous damage on reported game will always be cause for elimination. However, the carry must be considered concluded when the dog lays the game in the hands or feet of the conductor, which must remain firmly in place. It will be a title of merit the search for a wounded game (recovery) which has moved from the place of the fall, the more that it will be out of the way of foot. The non-recovery of injured games that has moved away from the place where it fell, may give rise to penalties, the severity of which must be assessed by the Judge. Where the soil conditions are very demanding, it is allowed to the conductor indicate remotely the drop point of the game to help the dog find the trail of the injured game. If, for any reason, the slaughter of the game has not occurred in the turn or later recall, the classified dogs that have not had the opportunity to perform the carry during the test will be subjected to the cold retrieving test at the end of rounds of all the competitors in the manner referred to in the following paragraph.

Such cold-carry takes place as follows: the dog will be led on a leash in bushy terrain, away from the public and from everything that may constitute grounds for a distraction and disorder. Then the judge, after having unbind the dog who will remain still, will throw in the air a fallen pheasant, making sure that the dog will see the fall. It will simultaneously exploded a shot in the air and then the dog will be ordered to carry. The carryover of the cold game must always be carried out immediately after the conclusion of all rounds of each test or battery, but before any supplementary rounds for the award of the CAC and the CACIT. The same type of game will still be used for all dogs tested. These cold-carry mode are valid on the tests on natural game.
